

THE FINAL QUESTION

'Like Dickens, Saratchandra had a bag of wonderful tales'—The HinduThe Final Question (Shesh Prashna) is one of Saratchandra Chattopadhyay's last novels and perhaps his most radically innovative. The novel caused a sensation when it was first published in 1931, drawing censure from conservative critics but enthusiastic support from general readers, especially...

Reader's Opinions

Written in a way- with sharp edges, whose sharpness shall cut numerous facets- in the form of questions. It challenges social customs which shall push you into an arena of skepticism, even if the person prior to reading it was inclined to those very same traditional belief systems- which we shelter and accumulate in a region within...

I never understood the book as a whole.
