Reader's Opinions

No, there was no one better than Sturgeon in '50s SF/fantasy, not even Bradbury.. "Bright Segment," the lead story, could make anyone's bones ache, not because it's a crafted SF tale, but because it's so frighteningly human.

Read it for: "Medusa""Microcosmic God""Prodigy"Don't bother with "Twink" or "Ghost of a Chance." Casual quick writing style; okay ideas poor execution. Basically, not too much science fiction, but a lot of vaguely speculative fiction. I was a bit disappointed.
