

IRENE'S CUNT

First published anonymously in France in 1928, Le Con d'Irene, is the last 'lost' masterpiece of Surrealist erotica. Like Georges Bataille's Story of the Eye (published the same year), Irene's Cunt is an intensely poetic account, the story of a man's torment...

Peek Inside the Book

And when she's alone again, as truly alone in the world as she's always felt herself to be, she looks at herself in a bamboo-framed mirror. Beautiful face, aglow with the taste of carnal pleasure, disdainful and avid and above all an indefinable look in which can be sensed unspecified danger, sensuality triumphant and a sort of intoxicating vulgarity. She likes what...

Reader's Opinions

For years I tried to find out who this incredible writer was. My copy is under the name Albert de Routtisie, same translation. Camus called it "The finest of all works touching on eroticism" but it's even more than that. Some other reviewers gave the basics, a paraplegic man is used as captive audience by his wife and daughter who engage...

Don't remember this at all. No doubt I read it b/c it was porn written by a Surrealist. The back cover tells me that it's about a paralyzed old man who gets his sexual experience by watching other people have sex thru peepholes. The real translation...
